

5 July 2015

Jesse Norman
Chair, Culture, Media and Sport Committee
House of Commons
London
SW1A 0AA

Dear Mr Norman:

I am very concerned about possible cuts to the BBC.

The BBC is worth fighting for because:

- It provides intelligent broadcasting and web content to this country. Content that is untainted by advertising.
- Its quality and values make it admired throughout the world. This standing gives it incredible access to stories, people and institutions around the world. The television series Syrian School gave us an insight into Syrian society before hostilities began, for example.

I urge you to allow the BBC to continue with strong funding and support.

Do not:

- Make it a subscription service.
- Top-slice it.
- Reduce funding.

By all means, modernise the licence fee, which, by the way, I am happy to pay. The BBC is excellent value for money.

Could you please tell me how you will support the BBC?

Sincerely,

Jean Prince